Problem

Hunter Warfield wanted to incorporate digital channels, including email and a self-service payment portal, into their existing voice and letter campaigns. To do so, they needed to solve for a number of challenges including managing customer consent, maintaining visibility and control across all channels, and ensuring a unified customer experience.

Solution

LiveVox's digital customer engagement platform enabled Hunter Warfield to easily incorporate customized emails that supplemented their letters, with direct links to their online payment portal. The emails not only tracked customer email consent, but also provided the BPO with full insight into customer behavior across digital channels. The BPO was able to leverage that data to make adjustments on their email campaigns, driving a more pro-active and customer-centric interaction with the BPO across email, SMS, and Voice.

Success

As a result, Hunter Warfield increased website traffic by ~24%, grew year over year revenue by ~50%, and created more pro-active engagement strategies across all channels while minimizing compliance risk.
